Arabia refers to the geographic region of the Arabian Peninsula. Before the era of the Muslim conquests in the mid-seventeenth century, some Arabic-speaking people also lived in Palestine, Syria, Iraq, and Christian Arab buffer states that were established north of the peninsula between the Sassanid and Byzantine empires. As a result of these conquests, people of the peninsula spread out over the wider region, today known as the "Arab world". Arabic is the region’s dominant language.

The Kingdom was recognized as a sovereign state in 1927 and consequently in 1932, the country was renamed the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. However, the economic depression experienced in the rest of the world intensified, causing desperate conditions in Saudi Arabia: the situation changed when oil was discovered in Dammm during the 1930s. Today, the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia is one of the world’s most important oil-producing countries. It is ruled by King Salman bin Abdul Aziz with the assistance of Prince Mohammed bin Nayif bin Abdul Aziz. They continue to move Saudi Arabia towards the national ideal of a modern country that is devoted to Islamic principles.

The Kingdom is steadily developing into a modern state using the latest technology in an Islamic framework. In 1945, the Kingdom had representatives present at the birth of the United Nations. In addition, Saudi Arabia participates in world affairs as a member of the United Nations. Oil Producing Exporting Countries (OPEC), Arab Summit Conferences, Organization of the Islamic Conference and the Gulf Co-operation Council. Furthermore, Saudi Arabia has given aid to over ninety-seven countries.

Religion is extremely significant in Saudi Arabia, and Saudi Arabian people believe that ultimate authority rests with God (Allah). The historical and religious importance of the Kingdom springs from Islam. The followers of Islam (Muslims) believe in God (Allah), and that Mohammed (peace be upon him) is His Prophet.

Makkah is the birthplace of the Islamic religion. Five times a day, Muslims face the sacred Ka’abah in Makkah during prayer. The Ka’abah is a black stone set in a silver frame, and it is the only remnant of the first mosque built by Abraham. It is covered with a black cloth decorated with verses from the Holy Qur’an (Koran) and is embroidered in gold thread. The Holy Qur’an is the sacred scripture of Islam and is universally recited in Arabic.
Al-Madinah, the second city of religious importance, is the burial site for the Prophet Mohammed (peace be upon him), the messenger of the Islamic religion. Only Muslims may enter the two holy cities of Makkah and Al-Madinah.

Expatriates must respect the feelings and beliefs of Muslims, as well as all prayer calls. It is offensive for non-Muslims to stare at, or walk in front of people who are praying. In addition, they must not walk over prayer mats when wearing shoes.

Fasting (Ramadan) – Muslims fast in the holy month of Ramadan, which is the ninth month of the Islamic calendar. From sunrise to sunset, Muslims must not eat, drink or smoke. It is forbidden for non-Muslims to carry out any of these activities in public during these hours.

Islam is the only legally and officially recognized religion in Saudi Arabia. Non-Islamic activities are forbidden. Custom officials may confiscate religious literature and other materials relating to non-Islamic religions, upon entering Saudi Arabia.
Greetings

It is important to make small talk asking general questions about family etc., but refrain from asking a Saudi man about his wife. Shaking hands is acceptable, although it may not always be appropriate for a female to shake the hand of a male. Saudi Arabian people tend to hug and kiss each other on the cheeks; to pull away from such a greeting may be considered offensive.

Arabs are justifiably famous for their hospitality. The most usual gesture of hospitality is the serving of Arabic coffee (kahwa) or tea (chai). It is impolite to refuse these offerings.

Saudi Arabian Official Dress

Saudi Arabian men usually wear the floor length shirt called a “Thobe” with leather sandals. A man’s headdress consists of 3 separate parts — a small white cap, called the “Tagiyah”, a large square cloth, called the “Ghutra”, and a double black cord to hold the Ghutra in place, called an “Agal”.

By law, all Saudi women must wear a black floor length cloak called an “Abaya” over their clothing. This is a conservative and loose fitting cloak intended to conceal the woman’s figure from head to toe. Many Saudi women also wear full-face veils; this consists of a “Burqa”, which has slits for the eyes.

Saudi Arabian Women

The Saudi community focus a lot on privacy and women are usually very conservative in the way that they dress and even interact with the outside world. From an early age, they are segregated from the opposite sex at school, at home and at social functions. A Saudi woman will only remove her veil in front of other women and male family members. It is advisable for foreign women to show their respect for the Saudi culture by dressing modestly.

Living in Saudi Arabia

- National and Religious Holidays

Eid Al-Fitr is a holiday of 3 or 5 days that takes place immediately after Ramadan to celebrate the end of the fasting period. Eid Al-Adha, also a 3 or 5 day holiday, commemorates the annual Hajj or Pilgrimage to Makkah. Also, The Saudi National Day is celebrated in Saudi Arabia on every 23rd of September. Saudi National Day follows the day where the King Abdulaziz announced the country as a kingdom on September 23rd, of 1932.

- The Islamic Calendar (Hijri)

The Islamic month is based on the lunar (moon) year rather than the solar (sun) year. The Islamic month consists of 29 or 30 days, making the year 10 to 11 days shorter than the Gregorian calendar. The Islamic calendar started in 633 A.D. when Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) fled to Madinah to escape his enemies. Due to the fact that Muslims follow the lunar calendar, Ramadan will never fall on the same day every year on the solar calendar.
Legal System in Saudi Arabia

The Legal System in Saudi Arabia is based on the Islamic Law and Jurisprudence, called Shariah. The law is strictly and swiftly enforced, and criminals are punished immediately.

- Residency Permit

The sponsor (or employer) is legally responsible for their employees at all times while they are in the Kingdom. As a foreigner, documentation must be carried at all times, to show sponsorship by a legitimate Saudi organization. This documentation will be in the form of a residency permit, called an "Iqama". The Human Resources department will provide an "Iqama" 6 to 8 weeks after arrival.

In the meantime, a temporary proof of sponsorship will be given. Passports will be kept by the Human Resources Department while living in the Kingdom, and will be returned when required for travel purposes.
Welcome Aboard

- Driver's License

A Saudi driver's license (for males only) may be obtained through the Human Capital Executive Administration. Car registration documents should be kept in the car at all times and it is advisable to have adequate car insurance. If traveling to another country, additional insurance may be required.

If involved in an accident, do not leave the scene of the accident until the police arrives. If it is a minor accident, payment of a small fine may be required. If it is a more serious accident, participants may be detained until a decision is made regarding what the consequences will be. If a death occurs, the other driver may be liable to pay the family SR100,000 regardless of who may be at fault; the amount to be paid may vary depending on the family of the deceased. If the car is damaged, a "repair permit" will be issued to authorize the repairs to the car. If stopped after the accident without this permit in possession, the police will suspect a hit-and-run accident and there will be dire consequences.

- Photography

It is forbidden to photograph the following:

- Anything related to military facilities, airports and buildings.
- Anything related to royalty, including palaces or residences, etc.
- Anything that would give the Kingdom a bad image in any way
- People, in particular women, unless given permission.

- Water

It is advisable to drink lots of water when in Saudi Arabia, to avoid dehydration and other medical problems. Most compounds have sweet (fresh) drinking water on tap, however many people choose to use tap water for cooking and bottled water to drink. A wide variety of bottled water is readily available and relatively inexpensive.

- Electricity Voltages

Most compounds in Saudi Arabia are fitted with dual-voltages (110v and 220v), running to separate sockets. As there are two systems in place, it is recommended that you check the voltage carefully when purchasing appliances, and double-check before plugging them in. Some appliances are available with a multi-system, and either voltage may be used. You may also find a supply of plug adaptors useful, as both American flat two-pin plug sockets, and European style two-and three-pin sockets are common.

- Audio-Visual Equipment

If buying any audio-visual equipment in KSA, such as a video-recorder or a DVD player, it is recommended that a system compatible with that in your home country is purchased.
